Maybe it wouldn't have mass media appeal, but for we VW types, it would be great. I still have a shortcut to the "movie" on my desktop and play it every couple of days. I love to be reminded of Bottomend's generosity and persistence, and the hippys' spirit and optimism. Maybe it could be the samba's first movie or web-based series? 😊

Just think what a following they'd build up.

You could sell the right world wide and send them on a round the world trip and where ever the broke some star hungree mach would be there to help.

Any money collekted could go to the grease foundation for promoting generostiy and frenship (am I getting a bit carried away her?)

ps I need to a link to the .mov movie cause I'm in macland too.

Had to wait days to get back on a computer to read the next bit after I got about half way through. What a story I laughed so much!!

We're about to head away to 6months in Europe with four kids and a dog in a bay, that will be seven if you include the dog. We sure hope we meet VW folk like you Bottomend. Hubbie is a newbie to all the engine stuff, me too, so lots to learn from all the posts.

Good luck to you all especially you hippies.

Little kids here give us the hippy sign when we pass in our van a VW is a timeless symbol.

I'm with you Bottomend let it never end, find a way to keep in touch

thanks

Suzie

Thanks for the kind words from Ireland and England!

I think it would be great if you and your family could post along the way during your 6 month vacation. A little loggin in to the Samba board from time to time to keep everybody abreast of your travels. Start a thread and I know you'll get alot of response's!

BTW, I just walked by the cul-du-sac to the burrito stand. I cant help but look over to the spot where the hippys were camped out and wonder....

For all I know they might have tried to take the bus to the east coast like they were talking about and broke down again. Is anybody checking other forum boards? Who knows... There might be the same sort of thing going on somewhere else that happened here!!!!
